Policy impact and open calls

13:15–14:00 High level discussion

Regional and National Scaling & Policy Impact
Moderation: Karel Charvát (CCSS)

The panel will examine how AI and GeoAI can support policy development, regional and national decision-making, and agricultural transformation, addressing data governance, technological sovereignty and implementation barriers.

Panellists

- Marieta Okenková — Slovak University of Agriculture (SUA)
- Kilian Cawley — Monaghan Integrated Development CLG (MID)
- Leoš Svoboda — Ministry of Industry and Trade of the Czech Republic (MPO)
- Raul Palma — Poznan Supercomputing and Networking Center (PSNC)
- Karel Jedlička — University of West Bohemia (UWB)
- Daniel Molina — SocialInnolabs (SINNO)
- Katriina Kajala — Mallusjoki Youth Association (MYA).

Key discussion questions

- How will AI and GeoAI influence the formulation, implementation and evaluation of regional and national policies?
- How can public authorities and other users retain control over their data, AI systems and critical digital infrastructure?
- When should data be openly available, and when are controlled sharing arrangements more appropriate? How can both approaches support effective AI use?
- What risks arise when AI combines and analyses open datasets, including re-identification, inference of sensitive information, biased conclusions and misuse?
- What is missing in technologies, infrastructure, skills, funding and institutional support for more effective AI adoption across Europe and within individual countries?
- How will AI change agricultural practices, advisory services and agricultural policy, and how can smaller farms benefit?
